Background

Public accommodations nondiscrimination laws protect people from being unfairly refused service, denied entry to, or other discriminated against in public places because of some aspect of who they are. The definition of “public accommodations” differs by state, but generally these laws cover anywhere someone is when they are not at home, work, or school, such as retail stores, restaurants, parks, hotels, doctors’ offices, and banks. While state laws vary, these laws commonly include protections against discrimination based on race, religion, age, disability, sex, and—less commonly—sexual orientation or gender identity.

State-by-State Sources & More Detail

Alabama

- No state public accommodations nondiscrimination law enumerating sexual orientation or gender identity

Alaska

- No state public accommodations nondiscrimination law enumerating sexual orientation or gender identity
- Formerly, following the June 2020 U.S. Supreme Court ruling in Bostock v. Clayton County, Georgia, the Alaska state agency explicitly interpreted existing state protections against discrimination based on sex to include both sexual orientation and gender identity for employment, housing, public accommodations, credit/lending, and government agencies/practices. See archived capture of Alaska State Commission for Human Rights (announced Dec 2020), agency social media post (Dec 2020), and subsequent guidance with further detail (Feb 2021). However, under pressure from conservative interest groups amid the 2022 election season, in August 2022 the agency rescinded its interpretation for all areas except for employment, which was explicitly covered by the U.S. Supreme Court ruling in Bostock. See this coverage for more details about this reversal, and see also the agency's social media post announcing the change (August 2022).
